If you have been exposed to a covid patient, you can be tested without showing signs or symptoms, if it has been 5-7 days since the known exposure. This amount of time will allow you to develop enough viral load to test positive without symptoms. If you develop any symptoms, then you do not need to wait the 5-7 days after being exposed.

4 Contact Professors

Please notify the professor of any in-person classes you have that you will be attending remotely. You do not need to specify if you have tested positive for COVID-19 or not. Your professor will give directions on how to participate.

THANK YOU FOR KEEPING THE UNIVERSITY HEALTHY AND SAFE

Please Continue to do so by Following these Safe Practices

Individuals must adhere to instructions to isolate, quarantine, practice physical distancing, and for returning to campus as given to them from the Utah County Health Department or BYU Risk Management and Safety.

Isolation is required for those who have been confirmed to have COVID-19. Also, individuals who are symptomatic and awaiting a test result should self-isolate. As general guidance, individuals who know they had COVID-19 or had symptoms and think they had COVID-19, should be aware of CDC recommendations for ending isolation.

Quarantine is for those who have had direct close contact with a confirmed case. Direct close contact means being within 6 feet of an infected person for a cumulative total of 15 minutes or more over a 24-hour period* starting from 2 days before illness onset (or, for asymptomatic patients, 2 days prior to test specimen collection) until the time the patient is isolated. During quarantine, individuals should self-monitor for symptoms. Because of the incubation period of COVID-19, individuals in quarantine should stay home and monitor for symptoms for 10 days since their last exposure. Individuals who live with someone who has COVID-19 must quarantine for 10 days. Individuals who were exposed to COVID-19 by someone outside of their household may be able test out of quarantine after 7 days following these recommendations from the Utah Department of Health.

Physical distancing is a practice for all to follow. Public health officials recommend remaining at least 6 feet apart from others.

Criteria to return to campus: Individuals may leave isolation or quarantine in accordance with the above instructions and those they receive from the Utah County Health Department or BYU Risk Management and Safety.
